Go

Outspoken Yoko might like to pose a few questions to fashion doyenne Vivienne Westwood (left) as she presents her new manifesto Active Resistance to Propaganda tonight at the Design Museum. £15 (020 7940 8783).

The left-wing firebrand will be interested to see May 68: Street Posters From The Paris Rebellion exhibition at the Hayward Gallery Project Space in the Southbank Centre. Until 1 June (0871 663 2501).

The leading lady should glide down to the Mark Hix Oyster and Chop House in Spitalfields, the latest offering from the ex-head chef of Le Caprice (020 7017 1930).

When he's not slicing and dicing he can check out artist Gajin Fujita's new show Pacific Tsunami, including Cinco de Mayo (2007, below). At Haunch of Venison, W1, until 24 May (020 7495 5050).

See

John Lennon's soulmate might relate to the documentary Joy Division, the story of singer Ian Curtis (above right) and his group as told by his surviving band members. In cinemas from today.

The fervent anti-apartheid campaigner won't want to miss South African playwright Athol Fugard's Hello and Goodbye, about a divided Port Elizabeth, starring Rafe Spall. At Trafalgar Studios until 17 May (0871 297 5461).

The new Take That musical Never Forget (below) will be a slice of British culture she won't want to miss. Opens at the Savoy Theatre on 7 May (0870 164 8787).

The amateur drummer can be one of the first to hear new material from The Kooks when they play Brixton Academy tonight (020 7771 3000).

Spend

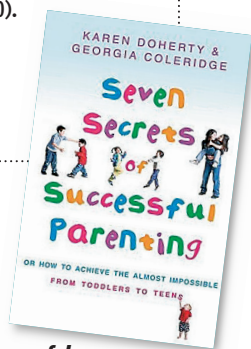

Controversial Yoko will be riveted by Frances Osborne's new book The Bolter: Idina Sackville - The Woman Who Scandalised 1920s Society and Became White Mischief's Infamous Seductress (Virago, £18.99). She can hear the author discuss it at Waterstone's Notting Hill on Wednesday at 7pm.

The 83-year-old has been veggie for more than 30 years. He should try the raw food at Saf Restaurant & Bar in EC2 (020 7613 0007).

California-born Cameron should grab herself a copy of Ottolenghi: The Cookbook (Ebury, £25), set to be the al fresco bible for summer.

The busy dad of Poppy Honey and Daisy Boo can pick up tips in Seven Secrets of Successful Parenting: On How to Achieve the Impossible by Karen Doherty and Georgia Coleridge (Bantam Press, £12.99).

Experience

The avant-garde artist can draw inspiration from Dr Roberts' Magic Bus this bank holiday weekend; a Routemaster that will parade up and down the King's Road with a troupe of cabaret performers in tow. Part of the Sacred live art festival (www.chelsea-theatre.org.uk).

Minstrels and Morris dancers at Kew Gardens this weekend will cheer up the politico. Woodland Wonders from Saturday until Monday (www.kew.org).

After a week of parties, Cameron can kick back with some live music and summer cocktails at Sunday Chill at the Sanderson hotel. At the Long Bar until September (020 7300 5587).

Fanatical foodie Jamie can brush up on all things oenological at a bespoke tasting with the Maison Aubert wine buffs, who now pair Neal's Yard Cheeses with their choice tipples. From £10 per person (www.maisonaubert.com).
